Ström Architects' Kattegat House on Sweden's west coast

STRÖM ARCHITECTS LYMINGTON, HAMPSHIRE

Originally from Sweden, Magnus Ström brings a Scandinavian sensibility to his work. His practice designs contemporary properties that combine boldness with simplicity, from the cantilevered form of The Quest, to house-on-stilts Island Rest and the brutalist-inspired Kattegat House in Sweden.

They say 'In today's world of 24/7 noise from social media, advertising, emails, mobiles and traffic, we want to offer reprieve. We do so with architecture that is simple and intuitive, yet strong and elegant.' stromarchitects.com

MELOY ARCHITECTS

LEWES, EAST SUSSEX

Charles Meloy cut his teeth working for the Richard Rogers Partnership, before founding his eponymous studio. Having built his own certified Passivhaus on the South Downs (right), the architect proves it's possible to create sustainable homes without compromising on design quality.

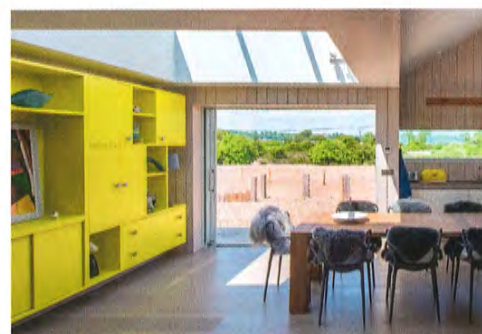

They say 'It is our belief that if we expend time and money in building, that we should do so with vigour and intent. Truly sustainable architecture should be undertaken to maximise both the life of the building and the wellbeing of those who inhabit it.' meloy.co.uk

CHARLES HOLLAND ARCHITECTS
DOVER, KENT

Formerly a director of avant-garde studio FAT, Charles Holland teamed up with artist Grayson Perry on the weird and wonderful House for Essex in 2015 (below). The designs coming out of his solo studio are in the same spirit, with a big injection of personality.

They say 'We react to the tastes and enthusiasms of our clients, drawing inspiration from their individuality. We consistently look to create spaces that offer enjoyment and visual richness.' charleshollandarchitects.co.uk

RX ARCHITECTS
RYE, EAST SUSSEX

It's telling that Derek Rankin and Rob Pollard named their studio after the fishing boat code for the area where they're based. The duo have become experts in designing for coastal settings, with highlights including a Camber Sands beach house and a larch-clad home overlooking Rye Harbour Nature Reserve (above).

They say 'Whether it's the patina created on metal surfaces or the natural silvering process of timber, our aim is to create architecture that complements its environment and is enhanced by the weathering process.' rxarchitects.com ►
